William Golding was born in 1911 in Cornwall. He went to Marlborough Grammar School and to the University of Oxford where he studied literature. After University he became a teacher, but at the start of World War II Golding joined the Royal Navy. He eventually became a commander. He saw many horrific sights, which I think gave him inspiration for his writing. In 1945, Golding returned to teaching English at Bishop Wordsworth's School. He stayed there until 1962, and established himself as a writer. The reason why Golding wrote Lord of the Flies is that he wanted to show what other people could do to each other.

In Fable he writes, "I had discovered what one man could do to another." He did not believe this before the war as he writes early on in Fable. "Before the second world war I believed in the perfectibility of social man." He uses the behaviour of boys to put across, that anyone can act in this way even how innocent and helpless you are. When Jack is introduced on to the island. He immediately takes control of the group of boys. He is a megalomaniac. He uses the fact that he is head chorister to exercise authority on the island. "I ought to be chief because I'm chapter chorister and head boy."

William Golding Inspiration For Lord Of The Flies

I can sing C sharp. However he is very irresponsible which would not be good for being chief on the island. He needs to be praised and rewarded constantly as that makes him feel more powerful. Jack is describe as being "tall, thin and bony and his hair was red beneath his black cap. His faced crumpled and freckled, and ugly without silliness. Out of this face stared two light blue eyes, frustrated now, and turning, or ready to turn, to anger." This is when Jack is first introduced on the island. This is evidence that there was evil and anger in Jack already and that he was not just a boy having fun.

The significance of the Mask is that, when Jack wore the mask, it hid his true identity. When Jack was behind the Mask he was free from shame and self-consciousness. The Mask brings out the evil in Jack. On the Mask there are three colours, which represent this evil Red, Black and White. The mask hides the civil Jack and lets the evil Jack shine through. Bill started laughing at Jack when he had the mask on. Bill saw the evil and ran into some bushes. Jack didn't understand the power of the mask. I think he saw it as being a game. "For hunting. Like in war."

You know dazzle paint. Like things trying to like something else. "The killing of the pig represents the turning point for Jack. It's the point in the book where Jack the young boy turns into a barbaric savage." You can cut the pig's throat to let the blood out otherwise you cannot eat the meat
