

Music as a life passion

When you really like something, you often don't give it a second thought. Without you realizing, it becomes a staple in your life – like food or water, and you can't imagine its absence. It's a part of you. That's how music is to me.

I've learned Indian Classical music for around 8 years. I have also been a regular student at my school choir for all my school life. Initially, I used to go to music classes because my parents asked me to. Also because I liked playing Badminton with my friends after the class. So when academics got overwhelming, it wasn't difficult for me to find an excuse to stop learning music. Despite this not-really-interested phase of learning music, thanks to good teachers and my inbuilt need to excel at what I do, I learned quite a lot. I cleared my examination at the junior diploma level and subsequently passed the third year (first part of Diploma) with distinction.

Music was already becoming a part of my life. So when I stopped practicing music, there was a hole. That's when the transition happened. That's when I knew I needed music in my life. From then on, I went back to music with an extra vigor. Soon, I discovered my fondness for the instrument, Synthesizer. I never had a formal training for playing the keyboard yet past lessons in classical music helped me grasp the notes and chords essential for playing the instrument.

Music moved on from being a small part of my life to a passion. The first thing that comes to my mind when I think of why I'm passionate about music is: music is relaxing to me. It takes me to a whole new world where there are no worries or assignments or deadlines! It holds my attention and a probably riveting show I can't remember to

Essays That Worked for Law Schools (Revised) Boykin Curry, Brian Kasbar, 2007-12-18 Law school applicants should consider this a guide to producing a competitive superior essay. These successful examples speak louder than any written how-to instructions could. The Book Watch Each year thousands of people apply to the most prestigious law schools across the country competing for an ever smaller number of spaces. But each applicant gets one chance to distinguish himself or herself from the pack: the law school application essay. In the essay you can spotlight the qualities you possess that transcripts and LSAT scores cannot reveal. Essays That Worked for Law Schools shows that winning essays come in a variety of styles and voices. One student writes about running a day care center. Another tells a harrowing story about driving a cab in New York City. And a third gives an incredibly convincing argument for why the world needs one more good lawyer. From the thousands submitted each year, the essays in this book were considered some of the best by admissions officers at the nation's top law schools. If you're facing essay anxiety, this book will educate and inspire you and most important of all help you write an essay that will give you the best chance of getting into the law school of your choice. College Admission
