Spaces in Architecture Bert Bielefeld, 2019-04-01 The design of a building is a complex process in which the architect develops spaces which are defined by a number of different parameters. The most important of these are space requirements, distances, furniture and fittings, and movement zones. From the dimensions of the human body, it is possible to derive guide values for these reference sizes that make spaces comfortable to be in and to use. Spaces in Architecture is a useful reference work for students and designers for quickly looking up detailed information on space scenarios that occur in many different types of buildings. For example, the book lists all important dimensions for entrance areas, doors, staircases, ramps, and elevators. On the basis of this fundamental information, it is possible to design buildings in terms of function and type.

Multi-Unit Housing in Urban Cities Katy Chey, 2017-11-06. This book investigates the development of multi-unit housing typologies that were predominant in a particular city from the 1800s to present day. It emphasises the importance of understanding the direct connection between housing and dwelling in the context of a city and the manner in which the city is an instructional indication of how a housing typology is embodied. The case studies presented offer an insight into why a certain housing type flourished in a specific city and the variety span across cities in the world where distinct housing types have prevailed. It also pursues how housing types developed, evolved, and helped define the city, looks into how dwellers inhabited their dwellings, and analyses how the housing typologies correlate in a contemporary context. The typologies studied are back-to-backs in Birmingham, tenements in London, Haussmann Apartment in Paris, tenements in New York, tong lau in Hong Kong, perimeter block, linear block, and block edge in Berlin, perimeter block and solitaire in Amsterdam, space enclosing structure in Beijing, micro house in Tokyo, and high rise in Toronto.

Toward an Integral Practice of Architecture Richter - Dahl, Rocha & Associés, 2014-02-06. The task of design is to integrate functional requirements, contextual conditions, and technological means into the creation of a work of architectural culture. After twenty years of practice, a team involving Ignacio Dahl, Rocha, Kenneth Ross, Christian Leibbrand, Manuela Toscan, and others of the Lausanne-based Swiss office of Richter, Dahl, Rocha Associés has undertaken to formulate the knowledge behind their architectural practice in a comprehensive manual. Covering the full span from initial design, building typology, technology, to the cooperation with other professions, in four extensive sections, this book conveys the concepts, methods, and details that constitute the tools of state-of-the-art architectural projects. The material used is completely first-hand, with the technical drawings redrawn to this purpose, coming from projects like the much-acclaimed integral renovation of Nestlé Headquarters, from residential office and healthcare buildings to the groundbreaking Swiss Tech Convention Center on the Lausanne Polytechnic Campus. Written with the editorial collaboration of Denise Bratton, this book sets new standards for architectural publications as tools for design.

House and Home Greta Gray, 1923 De woningplattegrond Dick van Gameren, 2010 Though mass customization has for some time been the magic word with which to bid farewell to the mass production of the twentieth century it seems that standardized solutions are still the norm in everyday construction practice A conservative construction industry strict rules and limited budgets force architects to make the most of the available means in order to produce an ideal design The Residential Floor Plan focuses on this dilemma faced by housing architects The volume takes two different approaches firstly the quest for new typologies we are already familiar with from modern architecture and the welfare state and secondly the typological invention which by contrast proceeds from the conventions of existing practice in residential construction The residential floor plan is the palette on which these different thrusts of development are preeminently visible
