The image features a large, dark, curved shape that resembles a stylized 'C' or a thick brushstroke. This shape is set against a light background. The shape is composed of two main parts: a thick, dark, curved line that forms the outer boundary, and a thinner, lighter, curved line that forms the inner boundary. The space between these two lines is filled with a dark, textured material, possibly a liquid or a thick paint. The overall effect is one of a dynamic, flowing form.

- Staging = preparation of a website, done in order to
 - temporarily store it on the computer of the webmaster
 - then transferring it to the actual web, i.e. using a special management tool that will automatically transfer files to the actual web server in order to make them available to the internet
 - the actual transfer is done by a computer program called FTP, i.e. File Transfer Protocol
- Staging the design of a website = developing a site and uploading it
- the preparation itself = after you have the files, then you can compress them together and upload them to the webmaster's computer, or you can use a special program that will automatically upload the files to the webmaster's computer
- all right = when done successfully it is perfect
