He loves Dixon but seeing Toby again reignited the flame he once held. Will he be able to choose one cowboy over the other before Dixon and Toby come to blows over him. The Little Green Car George H. Rothacker, 2024-06-14

Though Dillon's wife Doris passed away after more than 50 years of marriage, her death didn't diminish the relationship they'd shared. Instead, it enabled a second act to be added to their story, one that proved that love doesn't have to die but sometimes just requires a slightly altered ending. 82-year-old Dillon Everette lost his wife to pancreatic cancer in April 2029. Following her death, Dillon remained in his home, but his three children thought that he should move to a retirement community and perhaps even cease to drive due to a few mishaps of his that disturbed them. They loved their father but Dillon, who still conversed with his deceased wife, strove to maintain his independence. The children's infringement on his life provoked Dillon to escape from his home and them by planning a trip south in his 1953 MG TD, which he'd rebuilt himself nearly 35 years ago. Assisted by his financial advisor, he made sure that his house, property, and finances were in order and decided to retrace some of the trips taken during his earlier life with his wife and young family by heading south in the MG on his deceased wife's birthday, November 13th. After a few days on the road, he became involved in an incident from which he emerged a hero and acclaimed for his bravery on national news. His children read and heard about their father's adventure and thought he had lost his mind, but Dillon was approached by a documentary film producer to possibly record the story of his life and his accomplishments. The Little Green Car is about aging, the desire for independence, and the possibilities of a life that extends past the age of what many would call elderly. It's about how we see ourselves as we get older, as well as how others see us. It's also about the ways we can look ahead, plan for the future, while understanding the inevitability and the limitations of our lives moving forward. Stockton County Cowboys Box Set R.W.
