Abstract: This study focuses on the role of social and cultural capital in the development of entrepreneurial intentions. The study is based on a sample of 1000 students of a business school in Germany. The results show that social and cultural capital have a positive influence on entrepreneurial intentions. The study also shows that the influence of social and cultural capital is stronger for students with higher levels of education.

These are included in the table and represent the greatest pressure. Again, the four best effect can be seen for each of these five measures. Also, the economy has not yet been combined in the left half of the measures.

Several other universities across the country have been receiving notice for developing centers in which the business school and law school divisions of the university have merged. The University of Wisconsin is particularly well known for this type of program. The school has been successful in these endeavors largely through strong and continuing collaboration between the law school and the business school.
