Show Sold Separately Jonathan Gray, 2010-01-01 Highlights the trailers merchandising and cultural conversations that shape our experiences of film and television It is virtually impossible to watch a movie or TV show without preconceived notions because of the hype that precedes them while a host of media extensions guarantees them a life long past their air dates An onslaught of information from print media trailers internet discussion merchandising podcasts and guerilla marketing we generally know something about upcoming movies and TV shows well before they are even released or aired The extras or paratexts that surround viewing experiences are far from peripheral shaping our understanding of them and informing our decisions about what to watch or not watch and even how to watch before we even sit down for a show Show Sold Separately gives critical attention to this ubiquitous but often overlooked phenomenon examining paratexts like DVD bonus materials for The Lord of the Rings spoilers for Lost the opening credits of The Simpsons Star Wars actions figures press reviews for Friday Night Lights the framing of Batman Begins the videogame of The Thing and the trailers for The Sweet Hereafter Plucking these extra materials from the wings and giving them the spotlight they deserve Jonathan Gray examines the world of film and television that exists before and after the show

Time in Television Narrative Melissa Ames, 2012-10-01 This collection analyzes twenty first century American television programs that employ temporal and narrative experimentation These shows play with time slowing it down to unfold narrative through time retardation and compression They disrupt the chronological flow of time itself using flashbacks and insisting that viewers be able to situate themselves in both the present and the past narrative threads Although temporal play has existed on the small screen prior to the new millennium never before has narrative time been so freely adapted in mainstream television The essayists offer explanations for not only the frequency of time play in contemporary programming but also the implications of its sometimes disorienting presence Drawing upon the fields of cultural studies television scholarship and literary studies as well as overarching theories concerning postmodernity and narratology Time in Television Narrative offers some critical suggestions The increasing number of television programs concerned with time may stem from any and all of the following recent scientific approaches to quantum physics and temporality new conceptions of history and post history or trends in late capitalistic production and consumption in the new culture of instantaneity or in the recent trauma culture amplified after the September 11 attacks In short these televisual time experiments may very well be an aesthetic response to the climate from which they derive These essays analyze both ends of this continuum and also attend to another crucial variable the television viewer watching this new temporal play

Benjamin Logan Hudgins, 2022-09-02 In the 21st century, the companies that make stories seem increasingly uninterested in providing a satisfying product to what they see as an audience of captive fans. To free you from captive fandom, the Guide to Good Story will show you how the value of a story comes from Three Dimensions. The first dimension is appeal, which describes the value stories provide by stimulating our emotions and providing us with the kinds of experiences that we want to have. The second is quality, which describes how well or poorly a story provides the elements our brain needs to generate and maintain the suspension of reality. The third dimension, context, describes how factors outside of a story shape it and create value within the story. You will then learn how to use the three dimensions together to become an aficionado, someone who uses the Three Dimensions to find good stories for themselves. Slayer Keith Topping, 2002 Buffy the Vampire Slayer is a TV phenomenon, critically acclaimed and hugely popular throughout the world.
