Wandersee, D.E. Moody, 2006-04-11 Mapping Biology Knowledge addresses two key topics in the context of biology promoting meaningful learning and knowledge mapping as a strategy for achieving this goal Meaning making and meaning building are examined from multiple perspectives throughout the book In many biology courses students become so mired in detail that they fail to grasp the big picture Various strategies are proposed for helping instructors focus on the big picture using the need to know principle to decide the level of detail students must have in a given situation The metacognitive tools described here serve as support systems for the mind creating an arena in which learners can operate on ideas They include concept maps cluster maps webs semantic networks and conceptual graphs These tools compared and contrasted in this book are also useful for building and assessing students content and cognitive skills The expanding role of computers in mapping biology knowledge is also explored New Ideas in Performance Science Vassilis Sevdalis, Niels Chr. these hierarchical visions this book recognizes economy and the environment as co evolving systems The theoretical framework is elaborated based on the regulation and post Keynesian theories combined An idea of three dimensional factors capital labor and the environment leads to conceptual and mathematical models which will be applicable to wider analyses Using this framework Japanese history is analyzed as a typical example of environmental policy development Historical transformations of environmental policies and growth regimes are explained using indices and econometric analysis Experiences of strict regulations with positive economic impacts are also identified These works lead to some interesting implications which include mechanisms the possibility and conditions of green growth This book proposes a new approach by bridging the gap between evolutionary institutional economics and environmental economics which should be stimulating to them both and possibly open the door for a new research avenue
