The Oxford Handbook of Developmental Psychology, Vol. 1 Philip David Zelazo, 2013-01-15 Research in developmental psychology which examines the history, origins, and causes of behavior and age-related changes in behavior seeks to construct a complex, multi-level characterization of behavior as it unfolds in time across a range of time scales from the milliseconds of reaction time to the days and weeks of childhood, the decades of the human lifespan, and even beyond to multiple generations. Behavior in this view is embedded within what is essentially a dynamic system of relations extending deep within individuals. Thorough and engaging, this handbook explores the impact of this research on what is now known about psychological development from birth to biological maturity, and it highlights the extent to which the most cutting-edge developmental science reflects a new kind of intellectual synthesis, one that reveals how cultural, social, cognitive, neural, and molecular processes work together to yield human behavior and changes in human behavior. With insightful contributions from more than 50 of the world's leading developmental scientists, these two volumes will serve as an influential and informed text for students and as an authoritative desk reference for years to come.

Embodied Conversational Agents Justine Cassell, 2000. This book describes research in all aspects of the design, implementation, and evaluation of embodied conversational agents as well as details of specific working systems. Embodied conversational agents are computer-generated cartoonlike characters that demonstrate many of the same properties as humans in face-to-face conversation, including the ability to produce and respond to verbal and nonverbal communication. They constitute a type of a multimodal interface where the modalities are those natural to human conversation: speech, facial displays, hand gestures, and body stance. b. software agent insofar as they represent the computer in an interaction with a human or represent their human users in a computational environment as avatars, for example, and c. dialogue system where both verbal and nonverbal devices advance and regulate the dialogue between the user and the computer. With an embodied conversational agent, the visual dimension of interacting with an animated character on a screen plays an intrinsic role. Not just pretty pictures: the graphics display visual features of conversation in the same way that the face and hands do in face-to-face conversation among humans. This book describes research in all aspects of the design, implementation, and evaluation of embodied conversational agents as well as details of specific working systems. Many of the chapters are written by multidisciplinary teams of psychologists, linguists, computer scientists, artists, and researchers in interface design. The authors include Elisabeth Andre, Norm Badler, Gene Ball, Justine Cassell, Elizabeth Churchill, James Lester, Dominic Massaro, Cliff Nass, Sharon Oviatt, Isabella Poggi, Jeff Rickel, and Greg Sanders.

Comprehensive and accessible, Measurement and Statistics for Teachers includes short vignettes showing concepts in action, numerous classroom examples, highlighted vocabulary, boxes summarizing related concepts, end-of-chapter exercises and problems, six full chapters devoted to the essential topic of Classroom Tests: Instruction on how to carry out informal assessments, performance assessments, and portfolio assessments, and how to use and interpret standardized tests.
