Break the Stigma: Autism Nichole E

Scheerer ,April Hargreaves ,Catalina Sau Man Ng ,Matthew Daniel Lerner, 2024-12-17 While awareness of neurodiversity and specific forms of neurodivergence such as autism has increased over the last few years autism stigma and prejudice against autistic people remains a critical issue that warrants further attention and investigation The experience of stigma and prejudice such as discriminatory actions and attitudes towards autistic individuals on both a personal and public level can have many negative impacts across one's lifetime. These experiences can lead people on the autism spectrum and their families to avoid seeking help which can delay diagnosis and access to supportive services of not only autism itself but also co-occurring physical and psychological health needs. Prejudiced beliefs against autistic people may lead to many forms of discrimination including but not limited to medical education and employment discrimination. These attitudes can be built into society at a systemic level and influence policies that govern access to supports and our communities. Additionally, autism stigma and prejudice against autistic people such as stereotypical portrayals of autistic people in media and the language we use to describe autistic people can be invalidating to a person's autistic identity and to autistic culture. Further, the impacts of stigma and prejudice can be internalized by autistic individuals which may not only have poor effects on their wellbeing but also increase the want and/or need to mask or camouflage to pass as non-autistic. Masking or camouflaging can reduce a person's sense of belonging, self-esteem, sense of self-worth and close relationships, all of which are associated with poor outcomes. It can also lead to avoidance of opportunities such as connection with other autistic individuals that could increase quality of life. This Research Topic aims to showcase evidence on why the stigma surrounding autism and the prejudice against autistic people are so detrimental. It hopes to provide insights into research and interventions on how stigma and prejudice can be tackled as well as awareness, understanding and acceptance raised in the hope that the research presented will translate to best practice applications in clinical, public health, policy and community settings. We invite researchers to submit a range of articles including but not limited to original research, articles, reviews, meta-analyses, opinions, perspectives and case reports to provide new evidence on the following:

- Harmful impacts of stigma and prejudice on autistic people
- Interventions on reducing stigma surrounding and prejudice against autistic people
- Health promotion in autism, i.e. approaches that increase the mental and physical well-being of autistic people
- Interventions targeted at increasing understanding of autism and neurodiversity as well as increasing acceptance and advocacy of as well as allyship with autistic people
- Examining intersectionality in autism stigma and/or prejudice towards autistic people of diverse backgrounds

Pathways to Recovery Group Facilitator's Guide Lori Davidson, Diane McDiarmid, Jean M. Higbee, 2012-02-23. Since the first printing of Pathways to Recovery, people immediately worked to start groups with little guidance on how to do it. Some were held in formal settings while others were conducted with just two or three people in someone's living room. In most participants found themselves completing the exercises discussing the quotations or even arguing about whether certain topics should be included in one chapter or another. With so many formats emerging determining how to create a facilitator's guide was quite a challenge. The current guide is designed to be easy to navigate and use even for first time group facilitators. Modules include the following: An overview and goals for the topic, Recommended readings materials and handouts, Specific tips for facilitators and notes to guide each session, Detailed agendas with suggested activities. The guide gives group leaders all the information needed to facilitate a Pathways to Recovery group including tips on how to adapt the sessions to meet specific needs. While some groups have taken over a year to cover all the material in the workbook still others have found it possible to cover one chapter a week. In whatever way you decide to conduct your local group the material found in this guide will be helpful to you. A

Awakening Groups are made up of people from all walks of life: employees, church groups, leadership teams, neighborhoods, special interest groups, teachers, community groups, close friends, book clubs, college professors, staff or students. An Awakening Group can also be a diverse group of individuals who saw an advertisement about starting an Awakening Group in their area and they have signed up to work through the awakening tools together. The transformative power of the tools multiplies when people work through them together. The members of these Awakening Groups can become each other's closest friends and allies.
