Church in Communist China John Craig William Keating, 2012-02-16 Freedom of religious belief is guaranteed under the constitution of the People's Republic of China but the degree to which this freedom is able to be exercised remains a highly controversial issue Much scholarly attention has been given to persecuted underground groups such as Falun but one area that remains largely unexplored is the relationship between officially registered churches and the communist government This study investigates the history of one such official church Moore Memorial Church in Shanghai This church was founded by American Methodist missionaries By the time of the 1949 revolution it was the largest Protestant church in East Asia running seven day a week programs As a case study of one individual church operating from an historical rather than theological perspective this study examines the experience of people at this church against the backdrop of the turbulent politics of the Mao and Deng eras It asks and seeks to answer questions such as were the people at the church pleased to see the foreign missionaries leave Were people forced to sign the so called Christian manifesto Once the church doors were closed in 1966 did worshipers go underground Why was this particular church especially chosen to be the first re opened in Shanghai in 1979 What explanations are there for its phenomenal growth since then A considerable proportion of the data for this study is drawn from Chinese language sources including interviews personal correspondence statistics internal church documents and archives many of which have never previously been published or accessed by foreign researchers The main focus of this study is on the period from 1949 to 1989 a period in which the church experienced many ups and downs restrictions and limitations The Mao era in particular remains one of the least understood and seldom written about periods in the history of Christianity in China This study therefore makes a significant contribution to our evolving understanding of the delicate balancing act between compromise co operation and compliance that categorizes church state relations in modern China

Waiting for Gospel Douglas John Hall,2012-04-16 Christianity as faith centered in Jesus as the Christ came to be called got a foothold in the world and for a vital and vocal minority changed the world because it proclaimed a message that awakened men and women to possibilities for human life that they had either lost or never entertained That message the first Christian evangelists and Jesus himself according to the record called euangelion good news gospel For its first two or three hundred years Christianity was largely dependent for its existence upon the new zest for life that was awakened in persons who heard and were as they felt transformed by that gospel and at various and sundry points in subsequent history the Christian movement has found itself revitalized by the spirit of that same good news in ways that spoke to the specifics of their times and places The lesson of history is clear the challenge to all serious Christians and Christian bodies today is not whether we can devise yet more novel and promotionally impressive means for the transmission of the Christian religion let alone this or that denomination it is whether we are able to hear and to proclaim gospel We do not need statisticians and sociologists to inform us that religion and specifically our religion as the dominant expression of the spiritual impulse of homo sapiens in our geographic context is in decline We do not need the sages of the new atheism to announce in learned tomes and on buses that God probably does not exist The sea of faith has been ebbing for a very long time from the Introduction
