The company's financial problems were not helped by a series of layoffs. In 2005, the company laid off 100 employees, and in 2006, it laid off 100 more. Therefore, the intention was that of the policy, however, the king would still have to give up some things, though these were not the most delicate matters and the remaining ones were considered the strongest by the king himself. The Maya people still exist today and have survived numerous attempts to wipe them out over the course of their history. This unit refers mainly to the classical Maya period, which stretches from approx. 250-950 AD. During this time society became more organised around urban areas and society became more organised. Advances were made in astronomy, maths and language, as well as architecture and agriculture. Links were made with other peoples across the continent. Scholars disagree over why the classical period came to an end, although it has been hypothesised that it was caused by a widespread drought, which ended the growth of society and impoverished the population.

Life in a Maya Settlement

Maya settlements appear to not have been planned, but a general centre point was the temple. It is thought that the stepped temples were built both as a statement of grandeur and as a route to the heavens above. This is something the Maya have in common with many other civilisations across the ancient world. Rumours of human sacrifice have seeped into popular culture, but appear to be overblown. Each settlement also had wide-open plazas which served as a meeting point, as well as a ball court where games were held. Cities were generally not organised in an identical way, but had lots of common features. There does not appear to have been a central point of authority in the Maya empire, rather society was organised through a number of rulers at local level. This is perhaps the reason the Mayans endured, without a central powerbase that could be decapitated, agreements had to be made with a number of rulers, in a way this is similar to the Indian, or even European, city-states.
