The results of many different experiments point to the fact that the most important factors in the control of insect populations are the following: (1) the number of insects, (2) the quality and quantity of food, (3) the amount of space, and (4) the amount of light. The number of insects is the most important factor in the control of insect populations. The amount of space is the second most important factor. The amount of light is the third most important factor. The quality and quantity of food is the fourth most important factor.
