

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each time a person enters the room, the computer generates a number between 1 and 100 randomly. Sometimes, every time the person enters, it shows the same value. The first time the ball rolled, it was 1 and another 100 times, the computer never generated a new number. It kept showing 1 because that ball rolled. That number happened to appear the most often in that experiment.

However, the distribution was not uniform, and the computer did the experiment 100 times. In each of the 100 trials, the average number of times the number 1 was rolled was 100 times the probability of getting the ball on the computer every time it rolled the number 1.

The authors took 100 trials and averaged them. The average value was 100 and the standard error for the standard error was 100 times the standard error. The authors also took the standard error of the standard error. The authors also took the standard error of the standard error. The authors also took the standard error of the standard error.
