Although previous health research indicates that a diet of mostly whole grains can reduce a lot of the health benefits that are associated with eating meat, the study also revealed that diets of 25 percent whole grains and 75 percent meat can also reduce the risk of heart disease and cancer. "We found that the combination of meat and whole grains is important," said Dr. Willett. "It's important to eat a variety of foods, including grains, meat, and vegetables, and to eat them in moderation." The study also found that eating a diet of 25 percent whole grains and 75 percent meat can also reduce the risk of heart disease and cancer.
