Interaction between Automated Vehicles and other Road Users Philipp Wintersberger, Andreas Löcken, Debargha Dey, 2024-09-10 An increasing number of automated vehicles will pervade our traffic systems in the future The absence of a human driver requires these vehicles to communicate to and interact with other traffic participants such as vulnerable road users pedestrians cyclists and emerging mobility forms like eBikes or scooters but potentially also drivers of manual vehicles In this regard various studies and concepts demonstrating so called external Human Machine Interfaces

eHMIs have been presented in the past couple of years. Many of these works have investigated comparably simple scenarios such as a single pedestrian aiming to cross the street when an automated vehicle is approaching. Although we still welcome such contributions, research in this area will have to take more complex situations into account. This drives the need for research addressing other situations involving groups of vulnerable road users and traffic participants in different scenarios including roundabouts or urban shared spaces but also exploring the potential of communication and interaction beyond such classical situations to improve cooperation in traffic.

Readers can apply this knowledge to work in cartography, environmental monitoring and analysis, land use studies and landscape archaeology. Particular attention is also given to the reasons why a drone can dramatically boost a geographer's capability to understand geographic phenomena both from hard science and humanities oriented approach.

The effective management of shallow aquatic environments requires a detailed scientific understanding of the various contributory natural processes. This has both environmental and economic implications especially where there is any anthropogenic involvement. This book draws on international scientific research to examine the following lagoon related issues: classification, circulation, hydrodynamics, ecosystems, sedimentation, anthropogenic stresses and response to extreme events. The research was carried out by researchers who specialize in shallow water processes and related issues.
