

Emergency Department Coding Policy

Emergency department (ED) physicians often submit more than one diagnosis, often submitting both a chief complaint (CC) and a presenting problem as independent diagnoses. Both structures exist within the International Classification of Diseases (ICD-10-CM) coding system. While both structures represent the ED physician's effort to describe the patient's condition, the ICD-10-CM manual does not suggest that both structures be used to describe the same thing. Many times, errors result with double coding, submitting two independent primary conditions, leading to coding errors for which there are no safety netting.

Multiple codes cannot be submitted for the same condition. Conditions should only be submitted once. Multiple diagnoses should be submitted, however. Submission of an independent condition's diagnosis is not required, but based on reporting conditions that diagnosis submitted would not be used in the ED. Conditions should not be coded. The purpose of this policy is to provide opportunities for the ED and hospital to improve coding practice and performance.

Healthcare providers have demonstrated the potential to improve and improve performance, which is why we are working to improve our coding and submission practices.

Under the current ICD-10-CM manual, the ED physician should not be coding and reporting multiple conditions. Many conditions will be coded, but as a result, coding practice will improve. The current ICD-10-CM manual does not require the ED physician to submit multiple conditions, but it does require the ED physician to submit multiple conditions.

1. The ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
2. Multiple conditions should be submitted (primary, secondary, etc.) only for the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
3. In the ED, the ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
4. In the ED, the ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
5. In the ED, the ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
6. In the ED, the ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
7. In the ED, the ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
8. In the ED, the ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.

Emergency ED coding: The ED physician should not submit multiple conditions of the same condition, such as multiple conditions of the same condition.
