of suicide among young people or the self mutilation of patients suffering from certain personality disorders Both violence directed outward and aggression toward oneself pose considerable challenges to clinical management whether in the therapist's office or in the inpatient unit Although we have not been able to find successful deterrents to aggression a sizeable body of evidence does exist certainly of a descriptive nature Such data for psychiatric patients are scattered however and can be found in literatures as diverse as the biological ethological epidemiological legal philosophical psychological psychiatric and criminological Therefore given the increased frequency with which mental health professionals encounter cases of violence in their day to day work we believed it important that existing data be adduced in one comprehensive volume
