

Endocrine System

Works with the Nervous System to coordinate body processes through hormones transported in the blood.

- Made up of glands & organs that do not connect
- Chemical signals are slow acting, but longer duration

Neurohormones use the bloodstream for transport like all other hormones, but are secreted from a neuron rather than an endocrine cell.

Ex. ADH which is produced in the hypothalamus, but it is stored & released by the posterior pituitary gland.

- Can diffuse through cell membranes bc they are hydrophobic or nonpolar.
- They bind to Intracellular Receptors that are located in the cytoplasm or nucleus of a cell.

Includes estrogen, testosterone, progesterone, cortisol & aldosterone, but thyroxine, a thyroid hormone, also diffuses through the membrane.

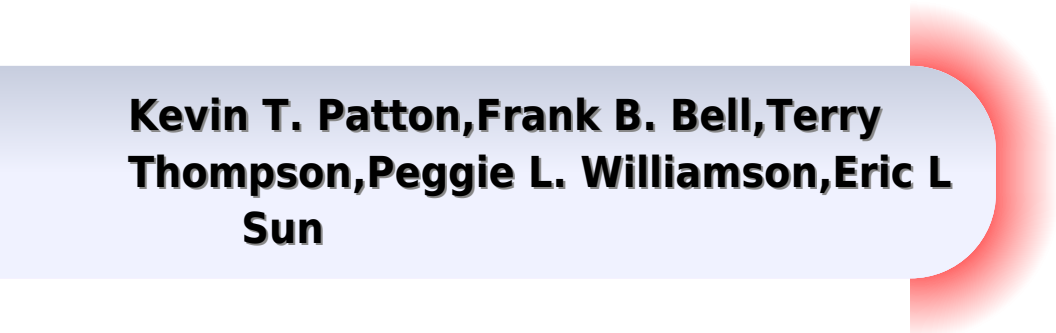

Steroid Hormones can trigger gene activation & protein synthesis in target cells.

Protein Hormones change the activity of existing enzymes in target cells.

Pineal Gland	Contributes to the circadian rhythm, influences daily biorhythms
Hypothalamus	Communicates w Pituitary by secreting RH & IH, controls the rest of the ES
Pituitary Gland	Plays important role in growth & development
Thyroid Gland	Helps regulate metabolism & functions in growth and development
Parathyroid	Regulates calcium levels in the blood
Thymus Gland	Plays role in immune responses
Adrenal Medulla	Controls cardiac function, involved in immediate response to stress
Adrenal Cortex	Monitors blood sugar levels, helps lipid & protein metabolism
Pancreas	Raises & lowers blood sugar levels, active in carbohydrate metabolism
