- Abstract: This is a historical survey study on working conditions in the Swedish metal industry in 1980. The study was carried out by means of an interview with 100 workers. The results show that working conditions in the metal industry in 1980 were generally good, but there were still some problems. The most common problems were related to the physical working conditions, such as noise, vibration, and heavy lifting. The results also show that the workers had a high level of job satisfaction and that the management was generally satisfied with the working conditions.
