

DSR470 Digital Signal Receiver

Basic one-way receiver for digital, analog basic, and pay-per-view channels.

The Motorola DSR470 can deliver digital satellite feeds with local analog service.

The Motorola DSR470 digital satellite receiver provides interactive digital cable programming through a unique satellite delivery method. By converting satellite signals to cable-friendly methods of transmitting programming, the DSR470 gives you quick access to up to 200 channels of digital and analog programming over a single coaxial cable.

To facilitate this type of digital system, the DSR470 accepts program signals, authorization, and control commands like a satellite receiver, but is installed at the end of a coaxial cable. Using its unique design, the DSR470 offers a wide range of viewing options—the combined offerings of analog cable and digital satellite programming to cable subscribers. Additionally, Motorola has developed a unified digital/analog on-screen display so the viewer can seamlessly scan all available channels.

Check with your local cable service provider for availability of this product in your area.

BENEFITS

- Cable and satellite technologies integrated and delivered in a single digital entertainment receiver
- Integrated program guide for seamless transition between analog and digital channels
- Pay-Per-View (PPV) for movies, sports, and special events
- Dolby® AC-3 surround sound when available on satellite signal
