Abstract. The authors report on a study of the effects of a 10-week, 12-session, self-help program for children with anxiety disorders. The program was designed to help children learn to manage their anxiety and to help their parents understand and support their child's treatment. The program was evaluated using a randomized controlled trial design. The results of the study showed that the program was effective in reducing children's anxiety and improving their coping skills. The program was also found to be acceptable to both children and parents. The authors conclude that the program is a promising intervention for children with anxiety disorders.
