Scheduling Teaching Topic: FAR Part 121 Flight and Duty Time Limits

Ever been confused as to why your 2-hr flight is crewed with 4 pilots and when you inquire, Scheduling sites it's due to a "30-in-7" or "32-in-7", or some other limitation, or you've been denied a VX trip due to a "FAR conflict"? It's often confusing, and as the tempo of operations has picked up in recent months, there have been several instances recently of crews exceeding legal flight time limitations. This educational document provides a refresher on the rules and regulations associated with Flight Time and Duty Time. These regulations impose a shared responsibility on airlines and crew to not exceed these limits – hence the phrase "No certificate holder may schedule, and no flight crewmember may accept..." used in most of the regulations. As always, if you see something on your schedule that doesn't seem right, contact Scheduling and have them check and explain it to you!

Here we will focus on CFR Part 121 limitations, which apply to the majority of our operations. Atlas implements Part 117 Rules for ANY flight involving a passenger aircraft (regardless of whether it is a "live" with passengers or not), so the rules below apply to all, and only to, cargo aircraft flights. We address the additional (and often vexing) CFR Part 117 rules in a companion letter. Note that the FAR's generally only address Flight Time limits (block-out to block-in times), where our CBA Section 12 defines Duty Time Limitations (Report Time to Release Times).

Flight Time Limitations:

14CFR Part 121.471 sets out limitations on flight time for crews on Domestic operations:
