

KCSE Computer Studies (0-420)

Is KCSE Computer Studies available to private candidates?

No, it is not available to private candidates, because the components comprised in it are available to private candidates.

Why do you not allow private candidates in the coursework?

The main reason is that the Centre through whom candidates enter the examination has to be able to guarantee that the coursework is the candidate's own work. If the Centre has not taught a candidate and has not seen the quality of his/her work at first hand, it can't make that guarantee.

Can Student A be regarded as a national candidate rather than as a private candidate?

It depends entirely on what taught him and in what capacity. If he is a school candidate, Student A must have been entered as a student at the Centre which must have been taught Computer Studies at the Centre, by a teacher employed by the Centre to teach him. If any of these criteria are not met, then Student A is a private candidate.

Student B entered as a national candidate a year ago. Now she wants to re-sit as a private candidate. Can she carry her coursework mark forward from last year's session?

No, she should enter for Option B. This is the only option available to private candidates.

Student C has paid a private tutor to teach her, and the tutor can verify that her project is her own work. Can she enter?

Sorry, but this is not good enough. There are people who, if paid, will write any piece of work, and if we accepted their work then our qualifications would not be secure.

Is there an option available which doesn't include the coursework component?

No. Computer Studies is a practical subject at least, and an option without the practical component would not provide a balanced assessment of the subject.

Student D is a private candidate and doesn't have a coursework mark to carry forward. Is there any way he can enter?

Sorry, but no. Even if he has been studying the course for two years, we will not accept his entry. This is made clear in the syllabus and in the syllabus synopsis.

Do I need any special training or preparation to supervise or mark the coursework? What do I need to do?

You -- or another teacher in the Computer Studies Department -- need to be trained to mark and internally moderate the coursework. The easiest way to do this is by completing a Distance Training Pack, which we will send you for free. Then you need to have your work on this pack assessed, which we will do for a further £20. In the first instance, you need to contact Janet Thomson at CSE, who administers the distance training.

What is the correct feedback for the project?

We don't require Centres to use any one particular feedback for all courses, and we would hope that whenever possible teachers would make use of a variety of different resources, drawing from the best bits of each. We do provide a list of useful advice our former teachers may find helpful, and you can find this on our website.

Do I need to teach the course in the order given in the syllabus?

No, and we don't recommend it. The syllabus outlines what may be assessed in the examination, but we would normally expect teachers to follow their own scheme of work based on the syllabus.
