Respiration is the process by which oxygen is taken into the body and carbon dioxide is removed. It is a metabolic process that occurs in all living cells.

Anatomy

The respiratory system consists of the trachea, bronchi, and lungs. The trachea is the main airway that leads from the larynx to the lungs. The bronchi are the airways that branch off from the trachea and lead to the lungs. The lungs are the organs that exchange gases with the blood.

Physiology

The respiratory system is responsible for the exchange of gases between the atmosphere and the body. It takes in oxygen from the atmosphere and releases carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. The process of gas exchange is called respiration.

Pathology

There are many diseases that can affect the respiratory system. Some of the most common are asthma, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), and pneumonia. These diseases can make it difficult to breathe and can be life-threatening if not treated.

Prevention

There are several things you can do to prevent respiratory diseases. These include not smoking, avoiding secondhand smoke, and getting regular checkups. It is also important to stay up to date on your vaccinations.

Conclusion

The respiratory system is a vital part of the human body. It is responsible for the exchange of gases between the atmosphere and the body. Without it, we would not be able to survive.

1. Frontal sinuses
2. Maxillary sinuses
3. Sphenoidal sinuses
4. Ethmoidal sinuses

RESPIRATORY SYSTEM

Lungs: spongy highly elastic paired organs of respiration.

- Right lung has three lobes and the left has two lobes to accommodate the heart.
- External surface is lined by a serous membrane covered by a pleural membrane that secretes serous fluid to prevent friction.
