

Description

Perhaps one of the most basic and widely used approaches in media entertainment is via uses and gratifications. In brief, uses and gratifications conceive audience members as active media users, with individuals choosing to consume media on the basis of their felt needs and the degree to which the media can successfully address these needs. A wide variety of needs exist, including instrumental needs, such as information seeking; needs related to social connection; and needs related to social status, among others. Some of the earliest studies on entertainment specifically employed what might arguably be characterized as a uses and gratifications approach. Since these earlier studies, a large body of research has examined the variety of uses and gratifications that individuals have for a diversity of entertainment forms and media.
