Learning in Information-Rich Environments Delia Neuman,Mary Jean Tecce DeCarlo,Vera J. Lee,Stacey Greenwell,Allen Grant,2019-12-31 The amount and range of information available to today's students and indeed to all learners is unprecedented. If the characteristics of the information age demand new conceptions of commerce, national security and publishing among other things, it is logical to assume that they carry implications for education as well. Little has been written, however, about how the specific affordances of these technologies and the kinds of information they allow students to access and create relate to the central purpose of education: learning. What does learning mean in an information-rich environment? What are its characteristics? What kinds of tasks should it involve? What concepts, strategies, attitudes and skills do educators and students need to master if they are to learn effectively and efficiently in such an environment? How can researchers, theorists and practitioners foster the well-founded and widespread development of such key elements of the learning process? This second edition continues these discussions and suggests some tentative answers. Drawing primarily from research and theory in three distinct but related fields: learning theory, instructional systems design and information studies, it presents a way to think about learning that responds directly to the actualities of a world brimming with information. The second edition also includes insights from digital and critical literacies and provides a combination of an updated research and theory base and a collection of instructional scenarios for helping teachers and librarians implement each step of the I LEARN model. The book could be used in courses in teacher preparation, academic librarian preparation and school librarian preparation.

No Child Left Behind and the Illusion of Reform Thomas Stewart Poetter, Joseph C. Wegwert, Catherine Haerr, 2006. No Child Left Behind and the Illusion of Reform highlights the scholarship of eight doctoral students in curriculum and their professor who took on the legal, political, philosophical, social, cultural, economic and curricular assumptions of the No Child Left Behind Act NCLB This book the manifestation of their work is a critical examination of the impact of the NCLB on the lives of children families and teachers and the elusive but powerful dynamic found between the rhetorical machinations of the law and the ideological touchstones that dominate the American political terrain This book openly challenges the law with arguments founded on solid research scholarship and data No Child Left Behind and the Illusion of Reform argues that this law is not only a bad idea for children but also for teachers parents schools and communities because it undermines good teaching through an over emphasis on testing and measurement NCLB also pits schools against each other in a competition for limited resources The book argues that the law sets impossible goals which further and unnecessarily defeat and deflate the institution of public education
