Elizabethan Sea-dogs William Wood, 1918 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1883 edition Excerpt CHAPTER XXXV In my youth and through the prime of manhood I never entered London without feelings of hope and pleasure It was to me the grand theatre of intellectual activity the field for every species of enterprise and exertion the metropolis of the world of business thought and action There I was sure to find friends and companions to hear the voice of encouragement and praise There society of the most refined sort offered daily its banquets to the mind and new objects of interest and ambition were constantly exciting attention either in politics literature or science THESE feelings so well described by a man of genius have probably been felt more or less by most young men who have within them any consciousness of talent or any of that enthusiasm that eager desire to have or to give sympathy which especially in youth characterises noble natures But after even one or two seasons in a great metropolis these feelings often change long before they are altered by age Granville Beauclerc had already persuaded himself that he now detested as much as he had at first been delighted with a London life From his metaphysical habits of mind and from the sensibility of his temper he had been too soon disgusted by that sort of general politeness which as he said takes up the time and place of real friendship and as for the intellectual pleasures they were he said too superficial for him and his notions of independence too were at this time quite incompatible with the conventional life of a great capital His present wish was to live all the year round in the country with the woman he loved and in the society of a few chosen friends Helen quite agreed with him in his taste for the country

Elizabethan Sea-Dogs: A Chronicle of Drake and His Companions William Charles Henry Wood, In the early spring of 1476 the Italian Giovanni Caboto who like Christopher Columbus was a seafaring citizen of Genoa transferred his allegiance to Venice The Roman Empire had fallen a thousand years before Rome now held temporal sway only over the States of the Church which were weak in armed force even when compared with the small republics dukedoms and principalities which lay north and south But Papal Rome as the head and heart of a spiritual empire was still a world power and the disunited Italian states were first in the commercial enterprise of the age as well as in the glories of the Renaissance North of the Papal domain which cut the peninsula in two parts stood three renowned Italian cities Florence the capital of Tuscany leading the world in arts Genoa the home of Caboto and Columbus teaching the world the science of navigation and Venice mistress of the great trade route between Europe and Asia controlling the world's commerce Thus in becoming a citizen of Venice Giovanni Caboto the Genoese was leaving the best home of scientific navigation for the best home of sea borne trade His very name was no bad credential Surnames often come from nicknames and for a Genoese to be called Il Caboto was as much as for an Arab of the Desert to be known to his people as The Horseman Cabott ggio now means no more than coasting trade But before there was any real ocean commerce it referred to the regular sea borne trade of the time and Giovanni Caboto

must have either upheld an exceptional family tradition or struck out an exceptional line for himself to have been known as John the Skipper among the many other expert skippers hailing from the port of Genoa
