Gettysburg Address

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth to this continent, in Liberty, and dedicated to the great cause they were then engaged in, and to which they were then committed, that they should hereafter live in a free and independent nation, under the care of their own chosen government. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether those principles are really true, or only a mere phrase. We have come to dedicate a portion of that ground, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is for us to decide whether we shall hereafter be remembered as those who lived at liberty, or as those who died in slavery.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate - we can not consecrate - we can not hallow - this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The main purpose of this occasion is to dedicate to the free people of this nation a portion of that ground, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is for us to decide whether we shall hereafter be remembered as those who lived at liberty, or as those who died in slavery.
