Martyrdom and Persecution in the Early Church W. H. C. Frend,1965 A full scale study in English of the relations between the primitive Church and the Roman Empire has been needed for a long time Since the turn of the century much new material has come to hand and new perspectives in the theological and historical study of the period has been opened up The conflict between Church and Roman Empire in the first two centuries A D can now be seen as part of a triangular struggle between the Jews Christians and the remainder of the Roman world whose roots go back to the Maccabean revolution against Hellenism in the second century B C The author has found evidence for the continuation of the Maccabean spirit in the theology of the Western Church He has connected the emphasis on the role of the martyr inspired by the Holy Spirit traceable in Tertullian and his successors in North Africa with the development of a distinctively Latin eschatology and understanding of the doctrine of the Trinity He contrasts the survival of apocalyptic in the West with the development of a more optimistic God Logos theology in the East where already by the third century A D the ideal of the ascetic was superseding that of the martyr

The onset of the persecutions of Decius and Diocletian sharpened the tension between these two ideals of Christian heroism. If the Roman Empire failed to crush the Church, the ultimate legacy of the persecutions is seen to be the permanent division of Christendom into its Eastern and Western halves.

Le g nie romain dans la religion, 1969* Heirs of Roman Persecution  ric Fournier, Wendy Mayer, 2021-06-30

The subject of this book is the discourse of persecution used by Christians in Late Antiquity c. 300-700 CE. Through case studies covering the full chronological and geographical span of the period, it investigates how the conversion of the Roman Empire to Christianity changed the way that Christians perceived their hostile treatment.
