2. Consider the value of α and the value of β that would result from the model. If α is positive, the model is consistent with the hypothesis that the rate of change in the number of species is proportional to the number of species. If α is negative, the model is consistent with the hypothesis that the rate of change in the number of species is proportional to the square root of the number of species. If α is zero, the model is consistent with the hypothesis that the rate of change in the number of species is proportional to the number of species raised to the power of β .
