International Handbook of Peace and Reconciliation Kathleen Malley-Morrison, Andrea Mercurio, Gabriel Twose, 2013-01-28 How do ordinary people from different regions around the world define peace and reconciliation? What factors do they think are necessary for promoting reconciliation between countries? Do they believe that individuals have a right to protest against war and in favor of peace? Do they believe that apologies can improve the chances of reconciliation? What do they think are the best ways for achieving peace? Does reasoning regarding the achievability of world peace vary by region? International Handbook of Peace and Reconciliation a companion volume to the International Handbook on War, Torture and Terrorism examines and analyzes how people around the world think about justice, governmental apologies, the right to protest, the peace process, the justifiability of armed conflict, the possibility of world peace and reconciliation. To address these questions, researchers from the Group on International Perspectives on Governmental Aggression and Peace (GIPGAP) administered the Personal and Institutional Rights to Aggression and Peace Survey PAIRTAPS to volunteers from over 40 countries representing the major regions of the world. The volume is organized such that the responses to the survey are summarized and analyzed by both by country and by theme. Integrative chapters provide an up to date overview of historical and current events relevant to peace and reconciliation and a grounded theory analysis of definitions of peace and reconciliation and of the role of apology in reconciliation. In addition to describing the major themes emerging from the responses in each region the volume reports on some exploratory analyses addressing the extent to which we found differences in patterns of responding based on characteristics such as gender military experience and involvement in anti war protest activity.

International Handbook of Human Response to Trauma Arie Y. Shalev, Rachel Yehuda, Alexander C. McFarlane, 2013-11-11 In 1996 representatives from 27 different countries met in Jerusalem to share ideas about traumatic stress and its impact For many this represented the first dialogue that they had ever had with a mental health professional from another country Many of the attendees had themselves been exposed to either personal trauma or traumatizing stories involving their patients and represented countries that were embroiled in conflicts with each other Listening to one another became possible because of the humbling humanity of each participant and the accuracy and objectivity of the data presented Understanding human traumatization had thus become a common denominator binding together all attendees This book tries to capture the spirit of the Jerusalem World Conference on Traumatic Stress bringing forward the diversities and commonalities of its constructive discourse In trying to structure the various themes that arose it was all too obvious that paradigms of different ways of conceiving of traumatic stress should be addressed first In fact the very idea that psychological trauma can result in mental health symptoms that should be treated has not yet gained universal acceptability Even within medicine and mental health competing approaches about the impact of trauma and the origins of symptoms abound Part I discusses how the current paradigm of traumatic stress disorder developed within the historical social and process contexts It also grapples with some of the difficulties that are presented by this paradigm from anthropologic ethical and scientific perspectives

Computer-Integrated Manufacturing Handbook V.D. Hunt, 2012-12-06. Manufacturing has entered the early stages of a revolutionary period caused by the convergence of three powerful trends. The rapid advancement and spread of manufacturing capabilities worldwide has created intense competition on a global scale. The emergence of advanced manufacturing technologies is dramatically changing both the products and processes of modern manufacturing. Changes in traditional management and labor practices, organizational structures, and decision-making criteria represent new sources of competitiveness and introduce new strategic opportunities. These trends are interrelated and their effects are already being felt by the U.S. manufacturing community. Future competitiveness for manufacturers worldwide will depend on their response to these trends. Based on the recent performance of U.S. manufacturers' efforts to respond to the challenges posed by new competition, technology, and managerial opportunities have been slow and inadequate. Domestic markets that were once secure have been assailed by a growing number of foreign competitors producing high-quality goods at low prices. In a number of areas such as employment, capacity utilization, research and development expenditures, and capital investment trends in U.S. manufacturing over the last decade have been unfavorable or have not kept pace with major foreign competitors such as Japan. There is substantial evidence that many U.S. manufacturers have neglected the manufacturing function, have overemphasized product development at the expense of process improvements, and have not begun to make the adjustments that will be necessary to be competitive.
