Unification of Italy

The unification of Italy (1861) involved a combination of factors relating to physical, political, and cultural geography. Physical geography deals with the exterior physical features and changes of Earth. Political geography focuses on the state and its territory. This type of geography examines the external relations of states and the relationships between governments and citizens. Cultural geography deals with people's traditions, beliefs, manners, and languages.

From the start, Italian unification faced major obstacles. First, the country was largely occupied by Austria. Second, the tremendous authority of the pope and the Catholic Church split northern and southern Italy in two. In the middle were the Papal States. Finally, the rugged geography of Italy posed additional problems in an age when transportation and communications were time-consuming and difficult.

The map of Italy shows how challenging it must have been to forge Italians into a unified national state, both physically and culturally. Note especially the mountains, the islands, and the ways in which Italy was divided into different regions, each with its own customs, traditions, and dialects.
