The Effect of War, Slavery, and National Identity
(1844-1877)

The mid-19th century in the United States was dominated by the burning question of the Civil War, a conflict that would determine the nation's very soul. From 1844 to 1877, Americans witnessed the country's greatest regional tensions, a brutal war, and the process of reconstruction.

The admission of Texas as a slave state in 1845, the Compromise of 1850, and the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854 all contributed to the growing divide between the North and the South. The Dred Scott decision of 1857 further fueled the controversy.

The Civil War, which began in 1861, was a turning point in American history. It was a conflict that would determine the nation's future. The war ended in 1865 with the Union's victory. The Reconstruction era followed, a period of rebuilding and reform. The 13th Amendment abolished slavery, and the 14th Amendment granted citizenship to all born or naturalized in the United States. The 15th Amendment prohibited discrimination on the basis of race. The Reconstruction era was a time of great change and challenge for the newly freed slaves and the nation as a whole.
