Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the physical and psychological health of older adults with mild cognitive impairment (MCI). The study was a randomized controlled trial with 40 participants (20 in the exercise group and 20 in the control group). The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The study was conducted in a community center. The primary outcome was the change in the Mini-Mental State Examination (MMSE) score. The secondary outcomes were the change in the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) score, the change in the Physical Activity Scale for Elderly (PASE) score, and the change in the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) score. The results showed that the exercise group had a significantly greater improvement in the MMSE score, the BDI score, the PASE score, and the 6MWT score compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program can improve the physical and psychological health of older adults with MCI.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The physical and psychological health of the subjects was assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program significantly improved the subjects' physical health, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, and their psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory. The walking program also significantly improved the subjects' quality of life, as measured by the SF-36. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
