

Diagram of a greenhouse showing the effect of atmospheric CO₂ on the temperature inside. The greenhouse effect is caused by the trapping of heat by the glass walls and roof, which prevents the heat from escaping. This results in a warmer interior temperature, which is beneficial for growing plants.

The greenhouse effect is a natural process that warms the Earth's surface. When the Sun's rays hit the Earth, they are absorbed by the land and water. The surface then warms up and radiates the heat back out towards space as long wavelength infrared radiation. But some of this radiation is caught by greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, which then radiate the heat back towards the Earth's surface, warming it. This is the greenhouse effect. The greenhouse effect is a natural process that is essential for life on Earth. Without it, the Earth would be too cold to support life. However, human activities have increased the amount of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, which has led to a warming of the Earth's surface. This is known as global warming. Global warming is a serious problem that needs to be addressed. We need to take action to reduce the amount of greenhouse gases we are putting into the atmosphere. This can be done by using renewable energy, reducing our carbon footprint, and protecting our forests. We need to work together to solve this problem and protect our planet for future generations.
