

Proposals is a common theme. Proposing programs involves creating the vision and the support structures necessary to see the dream to ground through to success. It is about knowing the current state and what enhancing the support system might require. Creating milestones and gathering the current staff and priorities is necessary through which to begin the transformation. Some of the steps that can be proposed, often as programs started or revised, are to implement an all employee survey each year, leadership training for all managers, and a succession plan for all key positions. Proposing programs must always consider all of these items, as well as to address the organizational culture, which is not easy to do.
