Types of Data

Quantitative - numerical data that can be measured

Qualitative - non-numerical data that cannot be measured

Discrete - data that can only take certain values

Continuous - data that can take any value within a range

Primary - data collected first-hand by the researcher

Secondary - data collected from existing sources

Population - the entire group of individuals being studied

Sample - a subset of the population

Sampling - the process of selecting a sample from a population

Random Sampling - every member of the population has an equal chance of being selected

Systematic Sampling - selecting every nth member of the population

Stratified Sampling - selecting members from different strata of the population

Cluster Sampling - selecting entire clusters of the population

Convenience Sampling - selecting members that are easy to reach

Measures of Central Tendency

Mean - the average of all the values

Median - the middle value when the data is ordered

Mode - the most frequent value

Range - the difference between the highest and lowest values

Interquartile Range (IQR) - the range between the first and third quartiles

Standard Deviation - a measure of the spread of the data

Variance - the square of the standard deviation

Coefficient of Variation - a measure of the relative variability

Skewness - a measure of the asymmetry of the distribution

Kurtosis - a measure of the 'tailedness' of the distribution

Probability

Event - an outcome or set of outcomes

Sample Space - the set of all possible outcomes

Probability - the chance of an event occurring

Relative Frequency - the ratio of the number of times an event occurs to the number of trials

Theoretical Probability - the probability of an event occurring based on the structure of the sample space

Experimental Probability - the probability of an event occurring based on the results of an experiment

Compound Probability - the probability of two or more events occurring together

Conditional Probability - the probability of an event occurring given that another event has occurred

Independent Events - events that do not affect each other

Dependent Events - events that do affect each other

Measures of Dispersion

Range - the difference between the highest and lowest values

Interquartile Range (IQR) - the range between the first and third quartiles

Standard Deviation - a measure of the spread of the data

Variance - the square of the standard deviation

Coefficient of Variation - a measure of the relative variability

Kurtosis - a measure of the 'tailedness' of the distribution

Types of Bias

Selection Bias - the error that occurs when the sample is not representative of the population

Response Bias - the error that occurs when the responses are not honest or accurate

Non-response Bias - the error that occurs when some members of the population do not respond

Coverage Bias - the error that occurs when some members of the population are not included in the sample

Measurement Bias - the error that occurs when the data is measured incorrectly

Systematic Sampling

Definition - a method of selecting a sample from a population by choosing every nth member

Advantages - easy to implement, ensures a spread of the population is covered

Disadvantages - may introduce bias if there is a pattern in the population

Example - selecting every 10th person from a list of 1000 people

Stratified Sampling

Definition - a method of selecting a sample from a population by dividing it into strata and selecting from each

Advantages - ensures that all groups are represented, reduces bias

Disadvantages - more complex than simple random sampling

Example - dividing a population into age groups and selecting from each

Cluster Sampling

Definition - a method of selecting a sample from a population by selecting entire clusters

Advantages - easy to implement, ensures a spread of the population is covered

Disadvantages - may introduce bias if the clusters are not representative

Example - selecting entire schools from a list of schools

Convenience Sampling

Definition - a method of selecting a sample from a population by choosing members that are easy to reach

Advantages - easy to implement, low cost

Disadvantages - high risk of bias, not representative

Example - selecting people at a shopping mall
