

Structure of an exemplification essay

An exemplification essay begins with an introductory paragraph which defines the topic and leads to a thesis statement at its end. The thesis statement should indicate the topic (hydraulic fracking) and a dominant impression, or view (dangerously endangering the environment).

body paragraphs should contain examples that support the thesis. Each paragraph can develop one specific example or several brief examples. Be sure to use transitions (for example, for instance, another example, etc.) to guide your audience from point to point.

The conclusion reinforces the the main idea by restating (not repeating) the thesis statement and/or by recalling the key points from body paragraphs

An exemplification essay should give enough examples, but avoid overloading with examples just to list as many as possible. It should include a fair a range of examples. An essay that exemplifies traffic hazards should not include only examples in your hometown. Give examples of
