Eighth Day Richard Newbold Adams, 2014-02-04 Can human social evolution be described in terms common to other sciences most specifically as an energy process The Eighth Day reflects a conviction that the human trajectory for all its uniqueness and indeterminism will never be satisfactorily understood until it is framed in dynamics that are common to all of nature The problem in doing this however lies in ourselves The major social theories have failed to treat human social evolution as a component of broader natural processes The Eighth Day argues that the energy process provides a basis for explaining comparing and measuring complex social evolution Using traditional ecological energy flow studies as background society is conceived as a self organization of energy This perspective enables Adams to analyze society in term of the natural selection of self organizing energy forms and the trigger processes basic to it Domestication civilization socioeconomic development and the regulation of contemporary industrial nation states serve to illustrate the approach A principal aim is to explore the limitation that energy process imposes on human social evolution as well as to clarify the alternatives that it allows Richly informed by contemporary anthropological historicism sociobiology and Marxism The Eighth Day avoids simple reductionism and denies facile ideological categorization Adams builds on work in nonequilibrium thermodynamics and theoretical biology and brings three decades of his own work to an analysis of human society that demands an extreme materialism in which human thought and action find a central place

Developing Children's Thinking Through Science Ronald D. Anderson, 1970 Understanding Human Development Ursula M. Staudinger, Ulman E.R. Lindenberger, 2012-12-06 K Warner Schaie I am pleased to write a foreword for this interesting volume particularly as over many years I have had the privilege of interacting with the editors and a majority of the contributors in various professional roles as a colleague mentor or research collaborator The editors begin their introduction by asking why one would want to read yet another book on human development They immediately answer their question by pointing out that many developmentally oriented texts and other treatises neglect the theoretical foundations of human development and fail to embed psychological constructs within the multidisciplinary context so essential to understanding development This volume provides a positive remedy to past deficiencies in volumes on human development with a well organized structure that leads the reader from a general introduction through the basic processes to methodological issues and the relation of developmental constructs to social context and biological infrastructure This approach does not surprise After all the editors and most of the contributors at one time or another had a connection to the Max Planck Institute of Human Development in Berlin whether as students junior scientists or senior visitors That institute under the leadership of Paul Baltes has been instrumental in pursuing a systematic lifespan approach to the study of cognition and personality Over the past two decades it has influenced the careers of a generation of scientists who have advocated long term studies of human development in an interdisciplinary context
