Radicalism, Revolution, and Reform in Modern China Catherine Lynch, Robert B. Marks, Paul G.

Pickowicz, 2011-03-31 This volume illuminates the relationship of China's radical past to its reformist present as China makes a way forward through very differently conceived and contested visions of the future. In the context of early twentieth century problems and the failures of global capitalism is China's history of revolutionary socialism an aberration that is soon to be forgotten or can it serve as a resource for creating a more fully human and radically democratic China with implications for all of us. Ranging from the early years of China's revolutionary twentieth century to the present, the essays collected here look at the past and present of China with a view toward better understanding the ideas, ideals, and people who have dared to imagine radical transformation of their worlds and to assess the conceptual, political, and social limitations of these visions and their implementations. The volume's chapters focus on these issues from a range of vantage points representing a spectrum of current scholarship. The first half of the book brings new insights to understanding how early twentieth century intellectuals interpreted ideas that allowed them to break with China's past and to envision new paths to a modern future. It treats of Chen Duxiu, a founder of the Communist party; Mao Zedong and Mao in relation to the non-Communist Liang Shuming; and with the Dalai Lama. With continuing threads of nation and nationalities of peasants, utopias, and dystopias linking the chapters, the book's second half looks broadly at the consequences of the implementations of radical ideas at the same time critiquing our accepted frameworks of analysis. Moving up to the present, the book investigates the effects of the reforms since the 1980s on long-term environmental degradation and on the emergence of a capitalist rural economy. It gives an unsparing view into contemporary rural China through independent films. The book concludes with an analysis of the unshakable persistence of the shibboleth, the rise of China in popul.

Encyclopedia of Science and Technology Communication Susanna Hornig Priest, 2010-07-14 The explosion of scientific information is exacerbating the information gap between richer poorer educated less educated publics The proliferation of media technology and the popularity of the Internet help some keep up with these developments but also make it more likely others fall further behind This is taking place in a globalizing economy and society that further complicates the division between information haves and have nots and compounds the challenge of communicating about emerging science and technology to increasingly diverse audiences Journalism about science and technology must fill this gap yet journalists and journalism students themselves struggle to keep abreast of contemporary scientific developments Scientist aided by public relations and public information professionals must get their stories out not only to other scientists but also to broader public audiences Funding agencies increasingly expect their grantees to engage in outreach and education and such activity can be seen as both a survival strategy and an ethical imperative for taxpayer supported university based research Science communication often in new forms must expand to meet all these needs Providing a comprehensive introduction to students professionals and scholars in this area is a unique challenge because practitioners in these fields must grasp both the principles of science and the principles of science communication while understanding the social contexts of each For this reason science journalism and science communication are often addressed only in advanced undergraduate or graduate specialty courses rather than covered exhaustively in lower division courses Even so those entering the field rarely will have a comprehensive background in both science and communication studies This circumstance underscores the importance of compiling useful reference materials The Encyclopedia of Science and Technology Communication presents resources and strategies for science communicators including theoretical material and background on recent controversies and key institutional actors and sources Science communicators need to understand more than how to interpret scientific facts and conclusions they need to understand basic elements of the politics sociology and philosophy of science as well as relevant media and communication theory principles of risk communication new trends and how to evaluate the effectiveness of science communication programmes to mention just a few of the major challenges This work will help to develop and enhance such understanding as it addresses these challenges and more Topics covered include advocacy policy and research organizations environmental and health communication philosophy of science media theory and science communication informal science education science journalism as a profession risk communication theory public understanding of science pseudo science in the news special problems in reporting science and technology science communication ethics

Values Education and Quality

Teaching Terence Lovat, Ron Toomey, 2009-04-07 Some revision of public schooling history is necessary to challenge the dominant mythology that public schools were established on the grounds of values neutrality In fact those responsible for the foundations of public education in Australia were sufficiently pragmatic to know that its success relied on its charter being in accord with public sentiment Part of the pragmatism was in convincing those whose main experience of education had been through some form of church based education that state based education was capable of meeting the same ends Hence the documents of the 1870s and 1880s that contained the charters of the various state and territory systems witness to a breadth of vision about the scope of education Beyond the standard goals of literacy and numeracy education was said to be capable of assuring personal morality for each individual and a suitable citizenry for the soon to be new nation As an instance the NSW Public Instruction Act of 1880 cf NSW 1912 under the rubric of religious teaching stressed the need for students to be inculcated into the values of their society including understanding the role that religious values had played in forming that society's legal codes and social ethics The notion therefore that public education is part of a deep and ancient heritage around values neutrality is mistaken and in need of serious revision The evidence suggests that public education's initial conception was of being the complete educator not only of young people's minds but of their inner character as well

4e Health, Food and Social Inequality Carolyn Mahoney, 2015-02-20 Health Food and Social Inequality investigates how vast amounts of consumer data are used by the food industry to enable the social ranking of products food outlets and consumers themselves and how this influences food consumption patterns This book supplies a fresh social scientific perspective on the health consequences of poor diet Shifting the focus from individual behaviour to the food supply and the way it is developed and marketed it discusses what is known about the shaping of food behaviours by both social theory and psychology Exploring how knowledge of social identities and health beliefs and behaviours are used by the food industry Health Food and Social Inequality outlines for example how commercial marketing firms supply food companies with information on where to locate snack and fast foods whilst also advising governments on where to site health services for those consuming such foods disproportionately Giving a sociological underpinning to Nudge theory while simultaneously critiquing it in the context of diet and health this book explores how social class is an often overlooked factor mediating both individual dietary practice and food marketing strategies This innovative volume provides a detailed critique of marketing and food industry practices and places class at the centre of diet and health It is suitable for scholars in the social sciences public health and marketing Subjects of the Sun Myles Lennon, 2025-05-09 In the face of accelerating climate change anticapitalist environmental justice activists and elite tech corporations increasingly see eye to eye Both envision solar powered futures where renewable energy redresses gentrification systemic racism and underemployment However as Myles Lennon argues in Subjects of the Sun solar power is no less likely to exploit marginalized communities than dirtier forms of energy Drawing from ethnographic research on clean energy corporations and community solar campaigns in New York City Lennon argues that both groups overlook solar's extractive underside because they primarily experience energy from the sun in the virtual world of the cloud He shows how the material properties of solar technology its shiny surfaces decentralized spatiality and modularity work closely with images digital platforms and quantitative graphics to shape utopic visions in which renewable energy can eradicate the constitutive tensions of racial capitalism As a corrective to this virtual world Lennon calls for an equitable energy transition that centers the senses and sensibilities neglected by screenwork one's haptic care for their local environment the full bodied feel of infrastructural labor and the sublime affect of the sun
