Representing a wide range of disciplines biology sociology anthropology economics human ethology psychology primatology history and philosophy of science the contributors to this book recently spent a complete academic year at the Center for Interdisciplinary Research ZiF discussing a plethora of new insights in reference to human cultural evolution These scholars acted as a living experiment of interdisciplinarity in vivo The assumption of this experiment was that the scholars while working and residing at the ZiF would be united intellectually as well as socially a connection that might eventually enhance future interdisciplinary communication even after the research group had dispersed An important consensus emerged The issue of human culture poses a challenge to the division of the world into the realms of the natural and the cultural and hence to the disciplinary division of scientific labor The appropriate place for the study of human culture in this group's view is located between biology and the social sciences Explicitly avoiding biological and sociological reductionisms the group adopted a pluralistic perspective integrative pluralism that took into account both today's highly specialized and effective sub disciplinary research and the possibility of integrating the respective findings on a case by case basis Each sub group discovered its own way of interdisciplinary collaboration and submitted a contribution to the present volume reflecting one of several types of fruitful cooperation such as a fully integrated chapter a multidisciplinary overview or a discussion between different approaches A promising first step on the long road to an interdisciplinarily informed understanding of human culture this book will be of interest to social scientists and biologists alike Wired for Culture

Mark Pagel, 2013-03-11 Does an excellent job of using evolutionary biology to discuss the origins of religion music art and morality Publishers Weekly starred review A unique trait of the human species is that our personalities lifestyles and worldviews are shaped by an accident of birth namely the culture into which we are born It is our cultures and not our genes that determine which foods we eat which languages we speak which people we love and marry and which people we kill in war But how did our species develop a mind that is hardwired for culture and why Evolutionary biologist Mark Pagel tracks this intriguing question through the last 80 000 years of human evolution revealing how an innate propensity to contribute and conform to the culture of our birth not only enabled human survival and progress in the past but also continues to influence our behavior today Shedding light on our species defining attributes from art morality and altruism to self interest deception and prejudice Wired for Culture offers surprising new insights into what it means to be human Evolutionary Biology and Human Social Behavior Napoleon A. Human Biology and Social Inequality Simon Slade Strickland, Prakash S. Shetty, 1998-05-28 Measures of biological variation have long been associated with many indices of social inequality Data on health nutrition fertility mortality physical fitness intellectual performance and a range of heritable biological markers show the ubiquity of such patterns across time space and population This volume reviews the current evidence for the strength of such linkages and the biological and social mechanisms that underlie them A major theme is the relationship between the proximate determinants of these linkages and their longer term significance for biologically selective social mobility This book therefore addresses the question of how social stratification mediates processes of natural selection in human groups Data like this pose difficult and sensitive issues for health policy and developments in this area and in eugenics are reviewed for industrialised and developing countries

Human Adaptability Charles E. Oxnard, Leonard Freedman, 1997 This volume takes its subtitle from the theme of the ASHB meeting for 1996 Human Adaptability Future Trends and Lessons from the Past The first paper is the annual conference lecture Human Evolution Today Which Way Next delivered by Professor Maciej Hennenberg the newly appointed Wood Jones Professor at the University of Adelaide This is followed by the transcripts of two papers resulting from a debate on Species and Human Evolution also from the meeting The first is Species Concept in Palaeoanthropology by Colin Groves and the second The Problem of Species in Hominid Evolution by Maciej Hennenberg There are also a series of individual papers Two of these are shorter integrative pieces Philosophical Problems in Palaeoanthropology by Darren Curnoe and A Biological Basis for Generative Learning in Science by Lynette Schavieren and Mark Cosgrove These are followed in turn by two proffered papers on specific problems Patterns of Morphological Discrimination in the Human Talus a Consideration of the Case for Negative Function by Robert Kidd and Charles Oxnard and The Specific Status of a new Siwalik Sivapithecine Specimen by David Cameron Rajeev Patnaik and Michelle Stevens The final contribution is one of the longer integrative papers which has characterised each of the prior volumes The Interface of Function Genes Development and Evolution

A Cooperative Species Samuel Bowles, Herbert

Gintis, 2011-05-31 A fascinating look at the evolutionary origins of cooperation Why do humans uniquely among animals cooperate in large numbers to advance projects for the common good Contrary to the conventional wisdom in biology and economics this generous and civic minded behavior is widespread and cannot be explained simply by far sighted self interest or a desire to help close genealogical kin In A Cooperative Species Samuel Bowles and Herbert Gintis pioneers in the new experimental and evolutionary science of human behavior show that the central issue is not why selfish people act generously but instead how genetic and cultural evolution has produced a species in which substantial numbers make sacrifices to uphold ethical norms and to help even total strangers The authors describe how for thousands of generations cooperation with fellow group members has been essential to survival Groups that created institutions to protect the civic minded from exploitation by the selfish flourished and prevailed in conflicts with less cooperative groups Key to this process was the evolution of social emotions such as shame and guilt and our capacity to internalize social norms so that acting ethically became a personal goal rather than simply a prudent way to avoid punishment Using experimental archaeological genetic and ethnographic data to calibrate models of the coevolution of genes and culture as well as prehistoric warfare and other forms of group competition A Cooperative Species provides a compelling and novel account of how humans came to be moral and cooperative

Adaptation and Human Behavior Napoleon Chagnon, 2017-09-08 This volume presents state of the art empirical studies working in a paradigm that has become known as human behavioral ecology The emergence of this approach in anthropology was marked by publication by Aldine in 1979 of an earlier collection of studies edited by Chagnon and Irons entitled Evolutionary Biology and Human Social Behavior An Anthropological Perspective During the two decades that have passed since then this innovative approach has matured and expanded into new areas that are explored here The book opens with an introductory chapter by Chagnon and Irons tracing the origins of human behavioral ecology and its subsequent development Subsequent chapters written by both younger scholars and established researchers cover a wide range of societies and topics organized into six sections The first section includes two chapters that provide historical background on the development of human behavioral ecology and compare it to two complementary approaches in the study of evolution and human behavior evolutionary psychology and dual inheritance theory The second section includes five studies of mating efforts in a variety of societies from South America and Africa The third section covers parenting with five studies on societies from Africa Asia and North America The fourth section breaks somewhat with the tradition in human behavioral ecology by focusing on one particularly problematic issue the demographic transition using data from Europe North America and Asia The fifth section includes studies of cooperation and helping behaviors using data from societies in Micronesia and South America The sixth and final section consists of a single chapter that places the volume in a broader critical and comparative context The contributions to this volume demonstrate with a high degree of theoretical and methodological sophistication the maturity and freshness of this new paradigm in the study of human behavior The volume will be of interest to anthropologists and other professions working on the study of cross cultural human behavior Some Myths in Human Biology: Discussions from Radio 3 ,1972 Evolution and Human Kinship Austin L. Hughes,1988-02-11 While there have been controversial attempts to link conclusions from sociobiological studies of animal populations to humans few behavioral scientists or anthropologists have made serious progress In this work Austin Hughes presents a unique and well defined theoretical approach to human social behavior that is rooted in evolutionary biology and sociobiology and which is additionally viewed as a direct continuation of the structural functional tradition in anthropological research Using mathematical and statistical techniques Hughes applies the principles of kin selection theory which states that natural selection can favor social acts that increase the fitness of both individuals and their relatives to anthropological data Among the topics covered are the subdivision of kin groups selection of leaders in traditional societies patronage systems and the correspondence between social and biological kinship The author concludes that patterns of concentration of relatedness are more important than average relatedness for predicting social behavior He also shows that social interactions can often be predicted on the basis of common genetic interest in dependent offspring The result is a major contribution to the field of behavioral biology On Human Nature Jonathan H. Turner,2020-11-24 In this book Jonathan H Turner combines sociology evolutionary biology cladistic analysis from biology and comparative neuroanatomy to examine human nature as inherited from common ancestors shared by humans and present day great apes Selection pressures altered this inherited legacy for the ancestors of humans termed hominins for being bipedal and forced greater organization than extant great apes when the hominins moved into open country terrestrial habitats The effects of these selection pressures increased hominin ancestors emotional capacities through greater social and group orientation This shift in turn enabled further selection for a larger brain articulated speech and culture along the human line Turner elaborates human nature as a series of overlapping complexes that are the outcome of the inherited legacy of great apes being fed through the transforming effects of a larger brain speech and culture These complexes he shows can be understood as the cognitive complex the psychological complex the emotions complex the interaction complex and the community complex God's Inspiration Put On Paper (GIPOP) Jve Rwg,2023-08-24 JVERWG believed that she is God s hand extended She has a passion to touch the lives of those who are broken like Jesus touched her no matter how simple She grew up in Point Hill Saint Catherine where she still resides She attended the Point Hill All Age School then moved on to Dinthill Technical High where her schooling was short lived She spent one year and one term She was fourteen years old when she dropped out of high school She had a passion for Nursing English language and English Literature and after numerous attempts to further her education her pursuits were unattainable At the age of forty she was privileged to sit for the very first time the CXC exams She took three subjects Maths Human and Social Biology and English Language and acquired a passing grade in Human and

Social Biology and English Language In 2018 and after many struggles she was inspired by the Lord that she would nurse with her words With her love for God and her passion for the Broken Ones her prayer is to fulfil this purpose
