Abstract—The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength and body composition of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control or an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 100% BW resistance training program, while the control group remained sedentary. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly greater increases in muscle strength and body composition compared to the control group. The authors concluded that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is an effective means of improving muscle strength and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
