Giuliano Plorutti Circus

Michael Rajnik

Giuliano Plorutti Circus:

Circus, 2014 Italian photographer Giuliano Plorutti's Circus sets aside the familiar sights of the show ring in order to portray the everyday life of circus performers. He is as it were more interested in the afternoon's practice than the evening's performance. He also favors the humbler circus groups to the large scale companies, those that offer simple combinations of music, theater, and dance. These unobtrusive black and white photographs depict performers of all kinds: jugglers, musicians, snake charmers, trapeze artists, tightrope walkers, clowns, posing informally for the camera in the midst of limbering up in private or in the ring, playing music together or alone, relaxing in their caravans with their families, or in more straightforward portraits facing the camera. The pictures were taken mostly from 2000 to 2009, with a few pictures taken in the early 1990s in Italy, France, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia, and vividly convey the realities of a nomadic lifestyle.
