

The Narrative/Descriptive Essay

The Narrative/Descriptive Essay

"What happened? When did it happen? Where did it happen? Who did it? What does it look like? What are the characteristics? What impression does it make?"

Purpose of Narrative/Descriptive Essay

"The Significance of the Story"

The purpose of an academic narrative/descriptive essay should not be confused with the purpose of a narrative essay. Often termed creative non-fiction, a narrative essay is considered to be a work of literature the purpose of which is often to enlighten or entertain the reader.

The purpose of an academic narrative/descriptive essay is much more straightforward than creative non-fiction. Creative non-fiction is, at heart, a "good story." Although an academic narrative essay may use some of the literary elements of creative non-fiction, such as pacing, dialogue, conflict, suspense and tension, its intention is different. The academic narrative/descriptive essay's purpose or goal is not so much to entertain as it is to convey, in a clear, purposeful way, the significance of the story being told.

An academic narrative/descriptive essay has a thesis in the first paragraph which communicates a dominant impression. In other words, it answers the unspoken question in the reader's mind: What is the point of the story being told? What is the dominant impression the writer is trying to illustrate to her or his reader?

This is not the case with most pieces of literary writing where the purpose is often unstated and therefore the reader often "guesses" at the theme or thesis.

Academic narrative/descriptive writing should convey a dominant impression, but the real key to successfully writing in this mode is to convey the reason or significance of the story being told or described.

The thesis and introductory paragraph should communicate this dominant impression and/or the main purpose for this particular narrative/descriptive story being told in essay form.

However, an academic narrative/descriptive essay will often employ literary techniques and/or devices to enhance the essay but also to demonstrate clear, supporting examples which help to highlight the significance of the thesis. These literary techniques include conflict, suspense and tension (or "plot") which help to give the reader a frame of reference such as time passing.

Further, anecdotes help to dramatize the writer's relationship with the subject. They also help to clarify the "the significance of the story" to the reader. In short, in the academic narrative/descriptive essay mode, these techniques are the "support material" of the essay which help to give depth and texture to the thesis and conclusion.
