affect symptoms of respiratory illness in the same children nor does it affect a rural control group unaffected by PSP

Cicchetti, Jeffrey A. Dubin, Colin M. Long, 2007-05-08 This book attempts to explain what went wrong in California s restructured energy markets and what must be done to restore California s economy and build new electricity systems The intention here is to reconcile the principles of competition and regulation California had a severe electricity crisis for about thirteen months beginning in May of 2000 The economic consequences and political fallout that arose from this crisis persist California s economy continues to suffer and the state s treasury is deeply in debt The state s three investor owned utilities were nearly financially decimated San Diego Gas Electric has recovered to a greater degree than the other two only because its retail prices are about three times the national average and for a time well above the other two IOUs in California Southern California Edison has recently been restored to investment grade and was granted a rate increase Pacific Gas Electric is emerging from bankruptcy This book discusses all of this in greater detail The problems and consequences arising from California s ill fated foray into electricity market restructuring could damage the state for years to come Challenges of this nature are not new to the Golden State In the past as we explain here pragmatic not entrenched approaches have worked best in California If California is to relatively quickly restore its previous enviable economic vitality and recover from the damage done to tarnish its luster pragmatic approaches must again be used     San Francisco Municipal Reports ... Board of Supervisors, 1898     Data Analysis for Business, Economics, and Policy Gábor Békés, Gábor Kézdi, 2021-05-06 A comprehensive textbook on data analysis for business applied economics and public policy that uses case studies with real world data     Overhead Wires for Street Railroad Service , 1890     The Political Economy of Publicly-provided Goods Katrina Lauren Kosec, 2011 This dissertation consists of three chapters which explore various aspects of the political economy of publicly provided goods I shed light on why governments do or do not invest in goods of different types and also how government versus private provision affects consumers. What follows are three empirical analyses testing the implications of competing theoretical models. My first chapter addresses the question: what drives governments with similar revenues to publicly provide very different amounts of goods for which private substitutes are available? Key examples are education and health care. I compare spending by Brazilian municipalities on pre primary education (a good that is also provided privately) with spending on public infrastructure like parks and roads which lacks private substitutes. I find that municipalities with higher median income and more inequality are less likely to allocate revenue to education or to expand pre primary enrollment. They are more likely to allocate revenue to public infrastructure. This seems to occur for two reasons. In rich and unequal municipalities fewer total people support public education spending the collective choice channel and also any given poor person wanting public education has less influence over policymakers there the political power channel. My second chapter addresses the question: can private sector participation (PSP) in the urban piped water sector improve child health? A fixed effects analysis suggests that the introduction of PSP decreases diarrhea among under five children by between 2.2 and 2.6 percentage points or 14-16%. An instrumental variables analysis that uses variation in the share of the world water market controlled by former colonizing countries suggests that the effects are twice as large. The difference between the OLS and the IV results can be explained by the fact that PSP is more likely when the water sector is distressed and causing health problems. Importantly, PSP appears to benefit the health of children from the poorest households the most. It also leads to higher rates of reliance on piped water as the primary water source which is a likely channel explaining child health improvements. My third chapter, joint with John Hatfield, examines how competition between governments affects economic growth. We find that doubling the number of local governments in a metropolitan area increases the income growth rate over 1969-2006 by 18% which implies an approximate 3900 difference in 2006 income. Decomposing this effect we find that 60% stems from inter jurisdictional competition changing the composition of the workforce while 40% comes from making existing workers more productive. The results support a formal model showing that competition for capital drives local governments to provide productive public goods at levels which maximize economic growth. Hatfield 2010
