

Gel Electrophoresis without Lysis Viral Insert:

Introduction:

Recent technological advances improve the specificity of gel electrophoresis.

Advantages of Gel Electrophoresis without Lysis Viral Insert:

Reduced "Gel Electrophoresis" contamination and cost, reduced time.

This leads to better resolution and lower optimization time. It is also known as "electrokinetic gel electrophoresis". This is a technique of separating nucleic acids by size. It uses electrical current to move the fragments of DNA through a medium containing negatively charged agarose gel. This causes the fragments to move towards the positive pole.

Procedure:

- (1) After electrophoresis, wash gel with distilled water until no DNA bands are visible and dry gel with filter paper.
- (2) Cut the gel into pieces of required length (gel slices) and extract total nucleic acids from each piece.
- (3) If the gel slices contain nuclear DNA, lyse cell wall.
- (4) Dissolve enzymes and DNAase in distilled water and add to gel slices and incubate for one hour.
- (5) When no visible bands (no protein contamination) are visible, lyse cell wall again and add proteinase kinase to enzymatic lysis medium.
- (6) proteinase kinase is used to remove proteins.
After the lysis medium is used add ethanol, then centrifuge.
- (7) Next when you centrifuge medium begin to the centrifuge samples at 10000 times g for 10 min.
The lysate should be clear because proteins have been precipitated by ethanol and now there is no protein in the lysate.
