Iggers, Laurent Wirth, Council of Europe. Council for Cultural Co-operation, 2000-01-01 Current History ,1927 History ,1928 The Teaching of History in Schools Oscar Browning, 1887 The Learning of History D. G. Watts, 2016-04-14 Originally published in 1972 this book is a systematic analysis of the objectives and methods of history teaching The book considers the criticisms of the 1960s and 70s of history as a subject and the pressures for its replacement in the school curriculum It examines the complex psychological background of learning history and suggests that historical understanding makes an important contribution to cognitive growth It also stresses the important part played by historical material in the emotional and imaginative life of the child Concluding with a discussion of practical classroom methods the author proposes objectives and characteristic concepts of the subject which may be embodied in all levels of teaching Teaching History in Primary Schools Pat Hoodless, 2008-07-30 This book introduces trainees and newly qualified teachers to the teaching of history in primary schools and covers key concepts skills and knowledge for the history curriculum at Foundation Stage KS1 and KS2 Contents include planning teaching and learning strategies assessment reflection and evaluation as well as a range of practical ideas for classroom activities and cross curricular themes Each chapter is underpinned by national and international research also included are links to important themes such as citizenship out of school learning sustainability diversity and inclusive practice Throughout content is related to new initiatives such as Every Child Matters and Excellence and Enjoyment

Teaching History in the Digital Age T. Mills Kelly, 2013-04-12 A practical guide on how one professor employs the transformative changes of digital media in the research writing and teaching of history Teaching History 3-11 Lucy O'Hara, Mark O'Hara, 2001-01-01 These books provide a constructive highly accessible and above all practical introduction to the teaching of Geography and History in early years and primary settings In particular they prepare initial teacher training students to meet government requirements for entry into the teaching profession These are comprehensive guides to o Geographical and historical knowledge and understanding o Planning teaching and class management o Monitoring assessment recording reporting and accountability o General professional requirements History's Children Anna Clark, 2008 What is it about Australian history Students dismiss the subject for being boring while politicians and concerned parents fret over their lack of historical knowledge The classroom has become the battleground of the history wars yet no one ever asks the children what they think about Australian history and what they like or don't about learning it Through interviews with around 250 Australian students from a wide variety of schools Anna Clark asks how teachers and students teach and learn Australian history This book is a lively and often surprising read that throws all kinds of challenges to students teachers and indeed politicians Teaching U.S. History Through Children's Literature Wanda Miller, 1998-11-15 Similar to U S History Through Children's Literature From the Colonial Period to World War II in format and approach historical fiction and nonfiction are integrated into modern U S History For each of these topics Miller suggests two or more titles one for use with the entire class and one for use with small reading groups Summaries of the books author information activities and topics for discussion are supplemented with vocabulary lists and ideas for research topics and further reading This integrated approach makes history more meaningful to students and helps them retain historical details and facts by immersing them in stories surrounding historical events A well researched and thorough resource Teaching History for the Common Good Keith C. Barton, Linda S. Levstik, 2004-07-13 In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik present a clear overview of competing ideas among educators historians politicians and the public about the nature and purpose of teaching history and they evaluate these debates in light of current research on students historical thinking In many cases disagreements about what should be taught to the nation's children and how it should be presented reflect fundamental differences that will not easily be resolved A central premise of this book though is that systematic theory and research can play an important role in such debates by providing evidence of how students think how their ideas interact with the information they encounter both in school and out and how these ideas differ across contexts Such evidence is needed as an alternative to the untested assumptions that plague so many discussions of history education The authors review research on students historical thinking and set it in the theoretical context of mediated action an approach that calls attention to the concrete actions that people undertake the human agents responsible for such actions the cultural tools that aid and constrain them their purposes and their social contexts They explain how this theory allows educators to address the breadth of practices settings purposes and tools that influence students developing understanding of the past as well as how it provides an alternative to the academic discipline of history as a way of making decisions about teaching and learning the subject in schools Beyond simply describing the factors that influence students thinking Barton and Levstik evaluate their implications for historical understanding and civic engagement They base these evaluations not on the disciplinary study of history but on the purpose of social education preparing students for participation in a pluralist democracy Their ultimate concern is how history can help citizens engage in collaboration toward the common good In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik discuss the contribution of theory and research explain the theory of mediated action and how it guides their analysis and describe research on children s and adults knowledge of and interest in history lay out a vision of pluralist participatory democracy and its relationship to the humanistic study of history as a basis for evaluating the perspectives on the past that influence students learning explore four principal stances toward history identification analysis moral response and exhibition review research on the extent to which children and adolescents understand and accept each of these and examine how the stances might contribute to or detract from participation in a pluralist democracy address six of the principal tools of history narrative structure stories of individual achievement and motivation national narratives inquiry empathy as perspective taking and empathy as caring and review research and conventional wisdom on teachers knowledge and practice and argue that for teachers to embrace investigative multi perspectival approaches to history they need more than knowledge of content and pedagogy they need a guiding purpose that can be fulfilled only by these approaches and preparation for participatory democracy provides such purpose Teaching History for the Common Good is essential reading for history and social studies professionals researchers teacher educators and students as well as for policymakers parents and members of the general public who are interested in history education or in students thinking and learning about the subject

History for Children Maria Smith, 2015-01-06

As parents we are in the best position to encourage our children's natural interest in history. It is ours they address their first historical questions: Where did I come from and Was I always here? These two questions contain the two main meanings of history: it is the story of people and events and it is the record of times past.

Teaching Jewish History Julia Phillips Berger, 2006

Inform your students' lives with the richness of thousands of years of Jewish history, culture, and tradition. Teaching Jewish History tackles separately each of the key Jewish historical periods: Biblical, Rabbinic, Medieval, Early Modern, Enlightenment, and Modern, as well as the North American Jewish experience. The authors shift focus away from rote memorization of dates, names, and places and instead examine each period through the lens of core historical concepts: the Diaspora, Covenant, acculturation, assimilation, and building community. History comes to life, helping students, whether elementary, middle, or high school or adult, develop a stronger Jewish identity. Teaching Jewish History gives teachers the tools to understand and explain the meaning of key concepts, terms, names, places, and events in each period of history. Identify and examine primary source documents and objects such as artifacts, diaries, sacred texts, photographs, and artwork. Conduct meaningful discussions of how the core concepts of Jewish history recur in and are relevant to each historical period. Develop a variety of activities including field trips, mock trials, oral histories, and role playing activities. Place historical events on a timeline. Use additional historical and educational resources such as books, articles, videos, and Internet sites. Teaching Jewish History is an invaluable resource for the novice and the expert teacher of religious and day school children and for educators working with adults in synagogues, community centers, and family education programs.
