Abstract This research focuses on the role of a customer's perceived value in the purchase decision process. The study examines the relationship between perceived value and purchase intention, and the moderating effect of customer loyalty. The results show that perceived value has a positive and significant effect on purchase intention, and that customer loyalty moderates this relationship. The study also explores the mediating role of perceived value in the relationship between customer loyalty and purchase intention. The findings suggest that perceived value is a key factor in the purchase decision process, and that customer loyalty can enhance the impact of perceived value on purchase intention.
