Greenhouse Effect and Global Warming

The greenhouse effect is a natural process that warms the Earth's surface. When the Sun's rays hit the Earth, some of the energy is reflected back to space and some is absorbed by the land and oceans. The land and oceans then warm up and radiate heat back to the atmosphere. Greenhouse gases, such as carbon dioxide, trap some of this heat and prevent it from escaping into space. This process is similar to how a greenhouse works, where the glass walls trap heat inside.

Human activities, such as burning fossil fuels, have increased the concentration of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere. This has led to a warming of the Earth's surface, which is known as global warming. The effects of global warming include rising sea levels, more frequent and severe weather events, and changes in the distribution of plants and animals.

Scientists are working to understand the full extent of the greenhouse effect and the impact of human activities. They are also developing strategies to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and mitigate the effects of global warming.
